Rascal WeGo.

Sometimes solving mobility problems needs a different solution to a problem that has been around for a few years. Manual wheelchairs have been used for over 30 years and when introduced gave mobility to many people who would otherwise be housebound. The main problem was if a carer had to push a wheelchair it was very tiring and hard work, so at the end of a day out they would be exhausted. The next solution was to bolt on a battery pack to help the carer but it was part solution to the problem. At Advance Electrical Mobility we have taken the solution to the next stage. The WeGo power chair is based on a powered base that is steered by the carer allowing the power to take care of the strain, but offering more comfort in a padded seat than your standard wheelchair sling fabric seat. But the WeGo really comes into its own when its time to transport it in the car. It dismantles into easy manageable parts for loading into the car and the battery pack can be charged off-board so you can leave the WeGo in the car boot ready for your next trip. We thought about how the chair could be made more versatile for the customer. With an optional tiller bar that drops into the front castor stem we can unplug the rear attendant steering and plug in the tiller bar making the WeGo an indoor power chair. We believe we have the product that offers a different answer to an existing mobility problem and adds value with the indoor power chair feature. Not all customers are confident to drive a powered wheelchair or scooter outdoors, for these customers the WeGo offers you a different product with a versatile solution to an old problem.
